

Carole Fink, Humanities Distinguished Professor of History, introduced Mershon Center Visiting Scholar David Messenger who lectured at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies on May 17, 2010.

David Messenger, assistant professor of history and graduate director for international studies at the University of Wyoming, delivered a lecture titled "Beyond War Crimes: Denazification, National Security and American Deportation and Internment of SS Agents after World War II" at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies, where he was also a Visiting Scholar during May 2010.

Mershon affiliated faculty members gathered to hear David Messenger deliver his lecture titled "Beyond War Crimes: Denazification, National Security and American Deportation and Internment of SS Agents after World War II." During his time as a Visiting Scholar at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies, he worked on a study of Nazi party agents repatriated from Spain and Portugal to Germany in 1946 and 1947 following American and British investigations into their wartime and postwar activities.
